 UDC 329.18-025.44
 Anotation "The peculiarity of the approach of this collection is the observation of anti-fascism from different methodological perspectives that are analytically sensitive to its different articulations. The contributions in the collection of works constitute an important intellectual mapping of anti-fascism, which is necessary for its more complex understanding as a concept and value, revealing the complex relations between historical and contemporary anti-fascism, and indicating how anti-fascism today is a complex 'complex field of struggle'." (From a review by Maša Kolanović)

Anotation In all the emanations of the construction of the Yugoslav nation and state, among the political and cultural elites there was an awareness that one of the main threads that connected all Yugoslavs was the sharing of the same space. This did not refer only to concrete physical space (Yugoslav state territory), but also to more abstract notions of space - space of social interaction, cultural space, media space, etc. The idea of a common Yugoslav space was expressed by geographical border markers "from Vardar to Triglav". .

Anotation The manuscript brings completely new insights into the history of psychiatry in Croatia at the turn of the 19th and 20th centuries. With an argumentative interdisciplinary analysis, the authors defended their thesis on Croatian psychiatry from the end of the 19th century as degenerate psychiatry based on the medicine of the abnormal. They clearly showed how psychiatry became one of the more powerful apparatuses of normalizing culture and an indispensable element in the social disciplinary network of power in the modernization drive from the end of the 19th century. This book on the history of psychiatry shows how recent theoretical concepts can be productively used in interdisciplinary research and contribute to the development of scientific methodology in Croatia.

Anotation This book tries to answer questions about deep value and cultural divisions in Croatia, about the gap between left and right, liberal and conservative, cosmopolitan and communitarian. Taking polarization as an extremely complex topic that requires to be approached from multiple perspectives, the book brings together the works of scholars from different fields - political theory, quantitative political analysis, constitutional law, media studies, political psychology, philosophy and theology - in order to provide the reader with a more comprehensive picture of this demanding topic.

Anotation In the book Povijesni revizionizam i neustaštvo : Hrvatska 1989. – 2022., Goldstein thoroughly studied the works of historical revisionists in Croatia and Serbia in the last four decades. This book is not only a critique and analysis of revisionism, but also a catalog of its outbursts, sometimes sophisticated, sometimes reduced to banal hate speech, sometimes disguised by the prestige and authority of a scientific journal, and most often by mere confabulation of the political underground. Goldstein's book will therefore be an indispensable source for future researchers of the moral and intellectual problems of Southeast Europe.

Anotation After the fall of communism, on the wave of democratization, the previously silent communities were able to speak about their historical traumas. At the same time, however, there was a rivalry between different memory narratives and historical revisionism. This book examines the upheavals in the politics of memory on the example of the northern Adriatic and in a transnational perspective, including first of all Croatian and Italian, and partly Slovenian points of view. He organizes conflict relations in the northern Adriatic in the first half of the twentieth century into four thematic nodes: d'Annunzi's occupation of Rijeka in 1919, the Italian occupation of Yugoslav lands from 1941 to 1943, the Nazi concentration camp Rižarna San Sabba, which operated in Trieste from 1943. until 1945 and the Istrian exodus at the end of World War II.

Anotation In the book Svijet bez katarze (The World Without Catharsis) by Tvrtko Jakovina, Croatia is part of it when Vlaho Bukovac stays in Paris, while Croatian soldiers die in the Great War, when Nixon visits Zagreb in 1970, but also when it resembles Angola and the Philippines, or when a pharmacist from Vrbovac follows Emperor Maximilian to Mexico. World history is a thriller and horror in which anxieties and hopes alternate in a long amplitude, a story without a resolution that permanently denies us catharsis.

Anotation The book by the accomplished and experienced lawyer Srećko Ilić has multiple values and meanings. The main value of the book is that it is a research work, which is mainly based on court judgments, which belong to primary historical material, and numerous copies of parts of court judgments are published in the book. Based on this, as well as other sources and literature, the author systematically and comprehensively presented, juridically clarified and socially contextualized different types of politically rigged court processes that were intensively practiced in the totalitarian regime of communist Yugoslavia, from its creation to its collapse, i.e. from 1945 to 1990.

Description 192 str. ; 22 cm.
ISBN 9789532863383 : EUR 20,00 US$ 21,80
Anotation This novel, made of images that are constantly floating, also contains photographs taken by the author in Venice in 2019, and is also a dedication to all travelers, unusual characters and dreamers who, just like the main character, float somewhere between reality and imagination, past and future, leaving is like Venice with heightened emotions and memories surging in waves. Aleksandra Orlić wrote a book for all dreamers who enjoy the tide of emotions.

Description 264 str. ; 21 cm.
ISBN 9789535206347 : EUR 18,80 US$ 20,50
Anotation Autoportreti s damama (In Self-Portraits with Ladies) Čolić records the growing up of a sensitive and perceptive boy in Bosnia in the 1970s, and romances the later white-world adventures of a gifted writer, but also a streetwise rocker in exile. This is a book with a dazzling style and memorable pictures, full of fine humor and Mangup impudence, hedonism, but also lifelong suffering. It is the prose of a poet who has many and varied happiness, but also incurable wounds acquired in war and post-war, both in his homeland and in the white, but increasingly black world.

 ISBN 9789533556963 : EUR 21,10 US$ 23,00
 Anotation Brodovi nad gradom is a book of Osijek's very intimate topography, from Turkish history, through the nineteenth-century spatial (lack of) self-awareness of Osijek to Osijek's "socialist renaissance", a story about a city that gives the friendly eye of the storyteller small secret insights into spaces, buildings, mysterious street networks, into historical sediments that are reflected in the changes in the names of streets and squares, in Pannonian mildness and stubbornness. Osijek, Yugoslavia, is the narrator's childhood heterotopia recreated in the story of his own surreal urban genetic code.

 Anotation Četiri lakta unutra (Four Elbows Inside) is a story about the state of mental illness and persistent attempts to find help. In search of a better life, the heroine leaves the favelas of the mystical Mediterranean and goes to try her luck in the best country in the world. On the relationship between Norway (Oslo) and Croatia (Rijeka), this novel writes diagnoses of various social (dis)opportunities, as well as a unique interpretation of the immigrant experience. Because here, as there, now, as usual, the heroine is Invaderer, a curiosity at Ikea tables at home gatherings, business meetings and funerals. Striking and invisible at the same time.*

Kamen, cvijet i amen is a novel in which one dreams of another life and escape, a novel about a world in which there is no place for those who are sensitive and an island whose sunny idyll is only an illusion, and superstition and primitivism strike where we are thinnest. It also raises the question of crime and punishment, the balance of which is never fair. Triple-marked by the words from the title, written in an eruptive and energetic style, this is a prose of naturalistic scenes of the harshness of the real world and the soft parts of daydreaming and longing, and between this great contrast lies a great story.*

Translation of the book Sine, idemo kući
ISBN 9781912545346 (soft): EUR 17,70 US$ 19,30

A mother, a father and a son face illness and the new restrictions of a declared pandemic in the context of their native Croatia. The dream of returning as a family to the sun-soaked terrace of their home in Dalmatia is what inspires them to face – and conquer all. Ivica Prtenjača is a quiet novelist at ease in his craft, restrained in his narrative voice, while confident that his characters and their meandering fates will do their work on the reader. Let's Go Home, Son has got everything it needs: family values, loss, guilt, shame, love, disappointment and cautious hope.

Malvina is one of the most exciting prose works about the suffering of a woman, who could be our mother, sister, wife, lover. Although in many of his prose stories he narrates in the first person, in Malvina Mirko Kovač's narrative discourse is close to TS Eliot's doctrine of the poet's impersonality. Like the characters from his prose, he himself as a narrator escapes from himself, becoming a kind of catalyst or medium in which he unites the different life experiences of his protagonists*

 Anotation In the touching novel Portret duše (Portrait of a Soul), Miro Gavran tells us about the lives of seven women. In their stories, presented in different literary and non-literary genres (narrative, memoir, film script, war reportage, etc.), an important place is occupied by the painter Benjamin, a portraitist whose artisanal and above all intimate development we have been following since his birth. With a thoughtful and unusual structure in Portrait of a Soul, the author builds a solid and interesting plot, in which we witness impressive milestones in the lives of his vulnerable heroes as we easily pass through six decades of life in Croatia, from 1960 to 2020.

 Anotation Psi (Dogs) is a novel of a generation of millennials yearning for freedom, grown up to believe that anything is possible until the cruelty of liberal capitalism reduces them to precarious work in which there is no room for the ideals of youth. The girls and women in Dora Šustić's powerful generational novel are ready to end male dominance and misogyny despite the pitfalls of unrequited love and the deaths that surround them. And when they are aware that they are rushing to their doom, all heroes cannot give up their passion because without it there is no life.

Questions of corruption, loyalty, individual versus system, law and morality, love and freedom... emerge with ancient force in the nuclear age, our age, all around us and call for civic courage and risk.

Anotation Smrt Djevojčice sa žigicama (The death of a girl with matches), Zoran Ferić's first novel, is a hilarious darkly humorous novel in which the story of the murder of a local prostitute and the attempt to discover the killer is only a frame within which many ridiculous people parade, and even those who at first glance are "quite normal" are involved in a bunch of bizarre and unexpected events. However, no matter how "shifted" the novel is, its small island world is a fairly faithful copy of the grotesque Croatian reality, and the humor with which it confronts it is healing and salutary.

Anotation Tea Tulić's short novel Strvinari starog svijeta (The Carnivores of the Old World) is a melancholic story told by a daughter about her father, about growing up with her father, who, pressed by life, becomes - as his will dries up due to disappointment in the world and virtue - just a shadow of his former being. The story is fairy-tale and sometimes bitter, wistful moods alternate with comical situations with breakthroughs of naturalism and symbolism.

Description 177 str. ; 21 cm.
ISBN 97895335206118 : EUR 18,80 US$ 20,50
Anotation Šušanj is a novel with a silencer. Everything was reduced to the lowest tone, the desire and effort to build a new one on the burnt-out site of the destroyed house did not establish more than a minimum of work and conversation. Nicotine and caffeine are constants, the variables are explosions, deaths, euphoria, everything muted. It is the last months of the war in Bosnia, people are still dying, and the narrator, Daija, persistently requests that he move his mother from the grave in which she is buried, the narrator refuses, this is repeated until Daija's death, the conversations are minimized, they only serve to prove that they are still walking on two legs. Empathy is muted, despair is muted, physiological needs and obstinacy that lose their absurdity come to the fore.

Title Šutnja
Impresum Zagreb : Naklada Ljevak, 2023.
Description 824 str. ; 24 cm.
ISBN 9789533556949 ; EUR 30,50 US$ 33,20
Anotation In the criminal trilogy, which appears for the first time in this edition under the joint name Šutnja (Silence), Drago Hedl wrote bravely, truthfully and convincingly in literature about the phenomenon of child prostitution and human trafficking, based on real events that took place in Osijek in early 2010. years. Hedl skilfully interwoven these terrible events with the intimate relationships of the main characters and their obsessions, losses and traumas, and thus wrote a trilogy that is already a classic of Croatian crime literature today.

Description 208 str. ; 21 cm.
ISBN 97895335206323 : EUR 16,60 US$ 18,10
Anotation In the gap between salon debates about whether in literature we are done with the themes of the war(s) of the nineties or whether time distance is the most important thing for writing, Nebojša Lujanović wrote the novel Tvorница Hrvata in which he deals with the most shameful and absurd question of that era - are we our ? The novel still ends with laughter, perhaps also because it is clear that its protagonists will not become someone else - even though they are asked to do so and they themselves strive for it - but will remain themselves.

 Description 256 str. ; 21 cm.
 ISBN 9789538398254 : EUR 24,70 US$ 26,90
 Anotation Ivan Lovrenović's novel U sjeni fantoma (In the shadow of the phantom) is a precious literary work, an impressive example of writing skill and intellectual ethics. It can be read as the author's confession in which he describes the world of intimate memories and traumas, as a memoir dedicated to a family tragedy, as a historical novel that encompasses the time period of an entire century, a century marked by conflicts of ideologies and wars in which millions of people lost their lives.

 Anotation The exhibition From the Certain to the Possible: FACES, LANDSCAPES, HYPOCRISIES presents works from the collection of the Museum of Fine Arts in Split created over an extended time period, the themes and visual properties of which group them around the terms highlighted in the title. The intention is to understand, through the landscapes – both natural and urban, as well as their fragments and associative diagrams – the inner moods and mental states conveyed by the artists, and to draw attention, through observations of their own and other people's faces, to the multifaceted nature of human existence, but also to open that intimate world to the potential neurosis activated by the imposed adaptations and oppressions of collective conventions.

 Anotation The title of the autobiography Louvre je moj atelje, ulica moj muzej (Louvre is my studio, the street is my museum) - succinctly, precisely and accurately describes the artistic work of Braco Dimitrijević, one of the most important contemporary world artists. From his first exhibition, which he had as a ten-year-old in his native Sarajevo, to all the world's largest museums and galleries, Braco Dimitrijević uncompromisingly opens new perspectives on art, always relying on tradition that he reads differently, unencumbered by prejudices, and conquers the hearts of millions with his works. Braco Dimitrijević's autobiography is an incredible artistic and life journey on five continents, on which the author embarked, carrying with him parts of his homelands, Sarajevo and Dubrovnik, the legacy of his father, one of the most important Yugoslav avant-garde artists Voja Dimitrijević, and his mother, the extraordinary Jelena Dimitrijević.

Anotation The World Cup is the most important sporting event on the planet, and football has long since become a metaphor for life. For 24 sata, he recorded what was happening in and around Qatar every day, but it was always a possibility to go into the distant past and to analyze our present. In about thirty short texts, the history of the moment unfolds before us, as well as the history of football. Jergović is a perfect observer, he watched every match in Qatar, noted magnificent moves, but also seemingly unimportant details that show why football is a metaphor for the world.
