UDC	930Ančić, M.(01) * 94(497.5)"07/19"
Anotation	Alta voce et calamo acri is a volume belonging to the category known as a *Festschrift; in this instance, it marks the seventieth birthday of Mladen Ančić, Professor Emeritus at the University of Zadar. Spanning 1,043 pages across two volumes, the collection features scholarly contributions from 33 historians, art historians, archaeologists, and political scientists. The papers cover a chronological range extending from the early Middle Ages to the end of the twentieth century, while geographically focusing on Croatian lands and neighboring countries.

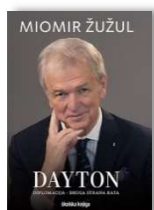

Title	Arheologija i popularna kultura /Daniel Rafaelić, Ema Kosnica, Jacqueline Balen eds.
Publisher	Zagreb : Arheološki muzej u Zagrebu, 2025
Description	156 str. ; 28 cm
Note	Katalog izložbe
ISBN	9789538143847 : EUR 29.80 US$ 35.20
Anotation	The texts collected in this book comprise scholarly and popular-science contributions that analyze and interpret the role of archaeology in film, television, literature, and comics, as well as in music. The book offers insight into how archaeology transcends the boundaries of the discipline itself to become a significant cultural phenomenon recognized even in the everyday life of contemporary society and demonstrates that popular culture is not merely a superficial interpretation of archaeology, but a powerful medium for disseminating knowledge, sparking public interest, and fostering a sense of responsibility toward the heritage of the past.

Author	Žagar, Davorin
Title	Čari političkoga u queer perspektivi : Prilog Machiavellijevu djelu mišljenja
Publisher	Zagreb : Disput, 2026
Description	146 str. ; 22,5 cm
ISBN	9789532605389 : EUR 17.00 US$ 20.00
Anotation	How can one read Machiavelli "against the grain," and what does his thought signify for our contemporary political experience? What is the connection between LGBTQ+ issues and the Florentine's political thought? This study ingeniously links the democratic and feminist facets of Machiavelli. An alternative image emerges for the reader: that of a new, plebeian queer ruler a drag performer whose emancipatory potential manifests in the utopian envisioning of a different reality, thereby opening a horizon of hope for the future and igniting plebeian creative action.

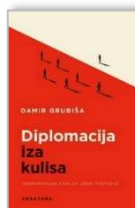

Author	Senčar, Zdravko

UDC	341.382(771Dayton)"1995"
Anotation	Dayton: Diplomacy – The Other Side of the War is the testimony of Miomir Žužul, one of the key participants in that process; it is written in a sober, impartial manner—like the recording of a camera capturing all those turbulent events from the sidelines.

Author	Čakardić, Ankica
Title	Dionizijski socijalizam Praksis škole Jugoslavenska marksistička filozofija i feminističko reispisivanje
Publisher	Zaprešić : Fraktura, 2026
Description	384 str. ; 24 cm
ISBN	9789533588582 : EUR 37.20 US$ 43.90
UDC	Ankica Čakardić's study Dionizijski socijalizam Praksis škole is a pioneering undertaking in many respects the first detailed reconstruction of one of the most exciting chapters in the intellectual history of socialism. Yet, the true novelty of this important book lies not in its inspired account of the Yugoslav Praxis School an intellectual movement that, from the 1960s to the mid-1970s, shaped the boldest critique of Stalinism and bureaucratic socialism but rather in the author's "ruthlessly critical" analysis of its philosophical ideas, through which she offers a hitherto non-existent feminist re-examination of that most prominent intellectual tradition of socialist Yugoslavia.

Author	Grubiša, Damir
Title	Diplomacija iza kulisa : komparativna analiza jedne profesije
Publisher	Zaprešić : Fraktura, 2026

UDC	327(497.5)
Anotation	"The Croatian Office." Nothing more needed to be said, nor was any further explanation required to clarify what kind of office it was. And that office was filled with people volunteers. A small number were physically present at all times, while many more maintained constant contact. Some were in the field, others on standby always ready to go wherever necessary and do whatever was required. Students, professors, generals, pilots, intelligence officers, diplomats, the unemployed individuals from all walks of life wanted to help the Croatia of their dreams, a country that, at the time, was truly an abstraction.

Title	Glina : 1918. - 1941. : politička povijest
Publisher	Zagreb : Hrvatski institut za povijest, 2026
Description	150 str. : graf. prikazi ; 25 cm
ISBN	9789538335709 : EUR 16.00 US$ 18.90
	Beginnings in the New State (1918–1929): Following the collapse of Austria-Hungary, the population of the Glina region found itself in a new state dominated by centralist policies. Croats largely opposed unitarism and supported the policies of Radić, whereas the Serb population predominantly supported the regime's parties. The January 6th Dictatorship and Divisions: With the imposition of the dictatorship in 1929 and the subsequent division into banovinas (provinces), Glina became part of the Sava Banovina, and from 1939, the Banovina of Croatia. Political life was marked by censorship and the persecution of the regime's political opponents.

Title	Hrvati u logorima Armije BiH : dokumenti i svjedočanstva : 1993. – 1994.
Publisher	Zagreb : Despot Infinitus, 2026
Description	268 str. ; 21 cm
ISBN	9789533662466 : EUR 33.20 US$ 39.20
Anotation	While the suffering of Bosniak civilians in camps run by the authorities of Republika Srpska as well as those run by the authorities of Herceg-Bosna has been extensively documented and prosecuted by domestic and international courts, the experiences of Croat civilians in camps run by the Army of BiH have remained significantly less explored. Hrvoje Mandić's book seeks to fill this historiographical gap by offering a detailed historical overview of the Croat-Bosniak conflict during the war in BiH.

Anotation	Ban Nikola VII Zrinski (Čakovec, May 3, 1620 – Otok Forest near Kuršanec/Kuršanečki Lug, November 18, 1664) is undoubtedly one of the most prominent figures in 17th-century Croatian and Hungarian history; during his lifetime, he was regarded as a "hero to whom Providence had entrusted the fate of Europe," and immediately after his death, he was hailed as the "Father of the Croatian Homeland." Historian Hrvoje Petrić now presents for the first time in Croatian historiography a comprehensive monographic account of the life and work of this distinguished Croatian Ban, whose life was abruptly cut short at the age of 44 by a tragic and unfortunate death during a wild boar hunt.

Anotation	The book is a compendium of eleven articles analysing, at various levels, spatial changes from an interdisciplinary social science perspective, during Croatia's third modernisation. The author analyzes the spatial and political origins of the problem, draws well-founded conclusions, and proposes solutions to address the identified issues. Her analyses, grounded in the sociology of space, transcend the boundaries of urban or rural sociology, addressing regional factors that influence security, social equity, ecological balance, and urban planning.

Anotation	The Basic croatian grammar A1-A2 – workbook grounded in theory and proven in practice enables the systematic practice of course material and fosters the active acquisition of linguistic forms. Designed to accompany the manual Basic Croatian Grammar: For Croatian Language Learners by Darko Matovac, the workbook facilitates a better understanding of Croatian grammatical rules. When learning a language with a highly developed morphological system like Croatian, students need to devote significant time to practicing basic grammatical structures, which are essential for building communication skills.

Anotation	The collective monograph Kako pišemo pravopis (How We Write: Orthography) explores how orthographic codification is shaped and transformed in Croatia and in culturally related Central European linguistic communities, particularly from the mid-20th century to the present. Proceeding from the premise that orthography is a "technical" matter yet simultaneously a potent social symbol, the authors analyze the situations in which orthography becomes an issue of language policy, who initiates debates surrounding it, how normative solutions are adopted and implemented, and how their effects are evaluated under different regimes.

UDC	821.163.42-31
Anotation	While the phenomenon of the Russian avant-garde has been thoroughly studied in Croatia, literary works dealing with this period are rare. This is precisely the subject of Denis Peričić's novel. The author has attempted to tell the story of the Russian avant-gardists their triumphs, hardships, and romances in the very style they used themselves, or perhaps in the way many of them might have written had Stalin not liquidated them.

Anotation	In his new novel Caffe bar Utrine , Željko Špoljar continues to dissect everyday life in Zagreb from the vantage point of a bar counter. The author uses this iconic neighborhood as a backdrop for a gallery of characters ranging from washed-up intellectuals and local drunks to modern-day groupies all seeking meaning in the local café. Just as in his previous works, the focus remains on people who exist outside the mainstream, yet whose destinies mirror society itself.

UDC	821.163.42-31
Anotation	Kristina Kegljen's novel Djeca Panonije (Children of Pannonia) begins as an innocuous tale of an unconventional upbringing on the fringes of stagnation, yet like the swollen waters of the Sava it spills over into the murky depths of agony experienced by those who have given up on themselves and those who have walked away from their own lives. Drawing on the acerbity and dark humor of obscure sources, a mystery-seeker is led not only to a resolution but also to a new rhythm of life.

Anotation	Draga praznino (Dear Emptiness) is a journal of observations regarding other books the author reads and the films and series he watches, as well as to a lesser extent a record of what he is writing or attempting to write. By force of circumstance, Draga praznino is also a chronicle of life during the pandemic. Ultimately, the commentary on the reality surrounding us might create the impression a mistaken one, the author hopes that this is also a diary of civilization's slow decline or its descent into an era of idiocracy.

Anotation	Through the eyes of a curious and perceptive young girl, we follow a working-class family in the 1980s—a time of optimism and progress marked by the purchase of their first "Tristač" car, moving into a new apartment, and summer holidays at workers' resorts. Within the broader social context, new urban structures clash with the legacy of deeply ingrained rural values. When the family faces an unknown situation that must be kept secret, the girl confronts voids of fear and loneliness, defending herself with imagination and wit.

Anotation	The novel Ja, barunica Castelli (I, Baroness Castelli) by Croatian actress and writer Anja Šovagović Despot explores and rehabilitates the most reviled woman in Croatian literature a character from Krleža's Gospoda Glembajevi (The Glembays) by questioning why generations of readers have unquestioningly believed Leone rather than her. The author seeks to uncover what Miroslav Krleža left unsaid about the baroness, giving her a voice and transforming her from a stereotypical figure into the complex protagonist of her own story.

Anotation	In this novel-saga, personal destiny transforms into a space of testimony where history is narrated through scattered fragments of memory and silence, through letters and photographs that have slipped from the family album. Family silence becomes one of the book's key languages: it conceals the fears, losses, and memories of adults things the children only begin to understand later on. Growing up turns into a whirlwind of departures and overnight disappearances.

Anotation	Following her successful poetry collection Lutke (Dolls), the author reaffirms her storytelling prowess and mature artistic voice with a collection of no fewer than 32 short stories. Each story bears a woman's name, and together they form a mosaic of the female experience in all its varied shades. The author presents a gallery of characters women of diverse nationalities, religious backgrounds, and social strata whose life stories raise questions regarding love and violence in relationships, childhood, motherhood, illness and old age, shame and liberation, and the realities of war and its aftermath.

Description	153 str. ; 21 cm
ISBN	9789535209188 : EUR 22.60 US$ 26.70
UDC	821.163.42-36
Anotation	Irena Matijašević's new book is a tribute to Danijel Dragojević—a poet who profoundly shaped Croatian poetry in the 20th and 21st centuries, as well as a conversation partner and mentor who influenced the author's professional development as the editor of the cult radio programs Poezija naglas (Poetry Aloud) and Riječi i riječi (Words and Words). The novel connects key figures in the writer's life—the poet and her father—who serve as sources of inspiration yet also embody authority figures whose shadow the author steps out of in search of her own liberated voice.

UDC	821.163.4(497.6)-32
Anotation	Nenapisane priče Charlesa Bukowskog (Charles Bukowski's Unwritten Stories) is a high-risk literary project in which the boundary between myth and authenticity is deliberately blurred. The voice speaking from these pages is raw, vulgar, brutal, and too convincing to be merely a literary construct. If this is a hoax, then it is a perfect one. If not, then we have just gained another Bukowski.

Anotation	Nietzsche s Trešnjevke (Nietzsche from Trešnjevka) is a novel about unfulfilled dreams and love found in the most unexpected places; a novel about aging, dignity, and moments of warmth, as well as the idea that philosophy is not in vain and that kindness always pays off.

Description	247 str. ; 21 cm
ISBN	9789533589565 : EUR 24.50 US$ 28.90
UDC	821.163.42-31
Anotation	Ovdje počinje šuma (Here the Forest Begins) is an intimate and unsparing chronicle of poverty, violence, and exile, a story of women who endure, houses that vanish, and memories that keep growing from the ashes. Monika Herceg has written a powerful, lyrical, and deeply moving novel about growing up in the shadow of family and historical trauma, but above all, about a language born from things, from bodies, and from the stories of our ancestors.

ISBN	9789535209034 : EUR 22.60 US$ 26.70
UDC	821.163.4(497.6)-31
Anotation	With the novel Ovjerena kopija (Certified Copy), Gavrilović has succeeded in crafting a remarkably timely work that skillfully encapsulates contemporary anxieties, insecurities, and fears. Through it, he further solidifies his status as the unique voice of a disillusioned and displaced generation living in a world where—as a character in the novel puts it—"the air smelled of war, and I had no desire to return home."

Description	232 str. ; 22 cm
ISBN	9789532595895 : EUR 23.30 US$ 27.50
UDC	821.163.42-31
Anotation	The dystopian novel Ovrha (Foreclosure) is set in a dehumanized world ruled by a muted form of totalitarianism and the control of actions and thoughts, where the loss of individuality leads to spiritual desolation. When a forced debt collection arrives at Ava's doorstep, the novel's protagonist discovers that a mysterious debt is linked to her name and that many others have been subjected to the same foreclosure process. At the same time, the world is changing—slowly but surely...

UDC	821.163.42-82(081) * 821.163.42-32 * 821.163.42-4
Anotation	The quality of Maja Uzelac's stories stems from her skillful use of postmodernist elements, both in her storytelling and in the themes she explores. Yet, all these "heavy" subjects are infused with humor, irony, and self-irony, so the reader does not perceive them as burdensome but simply enjoys her storytelling.

UDC	821.163.43-82(081) * 821.163.43-3
Anotation	The book War Was a Buddhist Monastery is a collection of prose pieces and essays by the prominent Bosnian-Herzegovinian and American writer, published in 2026 by the Multimedia Institute. As in his previous cult works, the author blends universal, cosmopolitan themes with deeply personal family and autobiographical details.

ISBN	9789537442835 :	EUR 19.20	US$ 22.70
UDC	821.163.42-36
Anotation	Republika napuštenih pasa (The Republic of Abandoned Dogs) grew out of reportage newspaper pieces written for a print weekly, always under tight deadlines and strict word-count limits, yet always holding the clear outlines of a story waiting to be explored and nuanced through direct, living contact. A literary heart beats within Dragana Grozdanić's reportage; the texts are richer, more tender, more poetic, and more thoughtful than even the finest reportage strictly requires. Each original piece was already woven from stories, any one of which could be and in a sense is a novel, albeit an unwritten one.

ISBN	9789533559650 :	EUR 26.90	US$ 31.70
UDC	821.163.42-31
Anotation	The collection of short stories for adults, Sreća se ne mjeri decibelima (Happiness is not measured by decibels), by Morea Banićević, is framed by stories about an unusual writer (is anyone ordinary?) who ends up signing an even more unusual publishing contract. This (auto) ironic streak already indicates noticing the details of everyday life or, more precisely, what that life may or may not be.

ISBN	9789533646282 :	EUR 21.30	US$ 25.10
UDC	821.163.42-31
Anotation	The novel Šizika is not merely a literary work—it is a space of profound empathy, understanding, and unobtrusive support. It is a book that some may pick up with trepidation, yet many will finish with tears, relief, and a smile. For, as the author demonstrates, the place of greatest pain is—paradoxically—also the place that opens up the greatest space for love, acceptance, and hope.

Publisher	Zagreb : Durieux, 2026
Description	163 str. ; 20 cm
ISBN	9789531886116 : EUR 20.10 US$ 23.70
UDC	821.163.42-4
Anotation	Špranje by Ivan Zrinski is a collection of essays written between 2020 and 2023 that brings together philosophical reflections, cultural criticism, personal experiences, and lyrical miniatures. The essays explore reading as an act of empathy, writers and their shadows, and the value of art in an age of speed and superficiality. These texts demonstrate that literature—even if it cannot save us from ruin—can nonetheless alter perceptions, deepen consciousness, and shape the reader. Špranje is a book for the attentive reader; it offers no ready-made answers, yet it opens up fissures through which we may glimpse meaning.

Description	163 str. ; 21 cm
ISBN	9789533589138 : EUR 23.40 US$ 27.60
UDC	821.163.42-31
Anotation	From the very first sentence, we sense that something bad has happened—something that drove the narrator to leave, to withdraw from the world of people, from everyday life, and from the very thing that triggered the tragedy. The reader can only surmise the nature of this tragedy while delving deeper into the protagonist's past and present. In the novel Treće noći (The Third Night), Mihaela Gašpar once again proves herself a master of characterization and of understanding the depths of the human soul.

Anotation	It is hardest for a person to come to terms with the agonizing death of those they love. This diary chronicles the passing of one's parents, first the father, then the mother with unflinching, even ruthless, candor. Its purpose is not to lament the past, but to serve as a story for those yet to experience such a loss: so they may know they are not to blame.

Description	148 str. ; 22,5 cm
ISBN	9789533589640 : EUR 26.60 US$ 31.40
Anotation	Zašto nisam naučila kuhati (Why I Didn't Learn to Cook) by Slavenka Drakulić is a warm, witty, and feminist book about cooking, growing up, the patriarchy, and kitchen memories. From her grandmother's and mother's kitchens to her first banana in Italy, the author explores why she never learned to cook and whether the way to the heart really must go through the stomach.

In Emotions and Performing Arts — Fear, Grief, and Rage, Una Bauer proceeds from the critical premise that both the purely cognitive (traditionally dominant) and the purely emotional, sensualist approaches to art are methodologically and epistemologically inadequate for systematically addressing the phenomena of post-dramatic theatre. As post-dramatic theatre has become the dominant aesthetic practice on the European continent, it has introduced considerable discord into traditional theatre studies circles, which lacked the analytical tools to engage with this new phenomenon. To address this challenge and remedy the theoretical shortcomings of certain strands of traditional theatre studies, the author draws upon the complex, interdisciplinary field of affect studies.
